MONEY AND METALS.

Lowell insisted that she come to El Paso and with the "other man" the old sweet hearts arrive here yesterday.

Finally Hallowsaid said goodbye after they promised to marry, and he prepared to leave for the east broken hearted. This morning he boarded a train, his baggage checked, his ticket purchased. But by some strange chance he received a letter from her. "Do not go, Billy," the call said. Hallowsaid did not go. He dragged his baggage from the coach and returned to his hotel.

Calling at the postoffice he received a letter, forwarded to him from his New York office. The letter was of recent

"I am in the clutches of this man," the letter said, a long, heart-rending letter, written by the girl on the stationery of an El Paso hotel. The letter more than hinted of some weird, physical power being wielded by "the other man."

So William Halliwell has remained in the southwest. Today he has spent in seeking his old sweetheart and "the other man."

er man." Their names he has not disclosed. He has asked the police to help him and has applied to railroad people. He seems very much in earnest.

HER CIVILIZED LAND

should be enlightened. The scientific and professional corps may be the regular army, but the public must be the reserve militia in any effective warfare against disease.

Typhoid Is Preventable.
 "When the people understand that typhoid fever is as preventable as are railroad accidents, we shall have a casus belli, and the courage needed for a victorious campaign. The government now protects us from cholera, leprosy, yellow fever, and other exotic plagues; why should it not also guard us against the danger that comes from the

as well as those that are but remotely imminent?

"Present dangers, such as tuberculosis, pneumonia, typhoid fever, and infantile diarrheas, are infections which reap the highest toll of death among us, and are foemen worthy of our best efforts.

"When this matter is better understood, the state will be enabled to protect its citizens against such preventable diseases, and the officials appointed to safeguard us will be held responsible, just as the law now holds employers liable for preventable accidents.

Campaign of Education.

"Organizations like life insurance companies, with their legions of doctors, armies of agents and hosts or patrons, could lend an effective and useful hand in this worthy warfare against disease. The life insurance officials, not only as organizations, but as individual citizens, could and should help in this campaign of education, and ought to foster fruitful and useful legislation of a public health character.

It is the plain duty of the public health militia to see that our governing bodies, whether the federal government, the state legislatures, or the municipal assemblies, enact public health measures of an obvious useful and tried nature, and also provide for their enforcement."
